

Sustainable City Declaration

The assets of Tsukuba City, including its rich natural environment symbolized by the famous Mt. Tsukuba, cutting-edge science and technology, and its diverse population have been created and passed down by our predecessors. We who live in the present need to pass on these assets to future generations with respect and gratitude. We also need to rise up to the challenges that local and global communities face, such as low birthrates and aging populations, poverty and inequality, and climate change.

These are missions that we share with both future generations and the rest of the world, and in order to shape the future through the power of connectivity, we hereby declare ourselves a "Sustainable City".

(I) A connected city brimming with charm

We aim to highlight Tsukuba's unique charm points and show them to the world. This is a city where citizens in diverse communities take center stage, and where people care about each other and enjoy a sense of being connected.

(I) A city where everyone can be themselves

We aim to build a city where no one is left behind, where each and every person feels safe and protected, and where social welfare reaches out to every corner of the community. We want our city to be a place where each and every citizen can easily integrate, amid an abundance of nature and happiness.

(I) A city that nurtures people who shape the future.

We aim to create a city where people can discover their surroundings and the world at large, where they can think about the future, and act upon their own initiative.

(I) A city that makes use of science and technology for its citizens.

We aim to contribute to resolving various pressing issues and spawn innovation in society by making the most of technological advances. This will help to improve both the daily lives of citizens as well as the global environment.
